These institutions include 164 hospitals, 43 community health centers, 134 community health stations, 14 women and children health maintenance centers, 17 disease prevention and control centers and seven health supervision stations.

The first phase of the project includes two administrative regions of Zhengzhou City with more than 2.3 million residents. During the phase one trial period, the solution is expected to cover 42,231 healthcare professionals that include 16,389 assistant doctors and 16,432 registered nurses.
